What's a Frog's Job? - Open-Ended Answer Key

1. It's important because it helps balance the ecosystem. Frogs control insect populations as predators, and as prey, they provide food for other animals.
2. If frogs disappeared, there would be more insects, which could harm plants and animals, and animals that rely on frogs for food might struggle to survive.
3. Frogs help balance the ecosystem by eating insects, being food for other animals, and showing us when there are problems with pollution or water quality.
4. Since frogs are sensitive to pollution and environmental changes, we learn that keeping water and land clean is important for their health and ours.
