The Unsolved Mystery of the Keddie Cabin Murders

In a quiet corner of Northern California, nestled in the serene woods of Keddie, a gruesome and perplexing crime known as the Keddie Cabin Murders unfolded on a fateful night in 1981. This chilling true crime tale has left investigators baffled and the community haunted by unanswered questions.

The Keddie Cabin

The story begins in Cabin 28 of the Keddie Resort, a tranquil mountain town where the Sharp family had been living for several months. The family consisted of Sue Sharp, a mother of five, and her children, John, Dana, and Dana's friend Dana Wingate. The cabin was a cozy retreat from the hustle and bustle of city life.

A Nightmarish Discovery

On the morning of April 12, 1981, Sheila, Sue's teenage daughter, returned to the cabin after spending the night at a neighbor's house. What she found inside was a scene straight out of a horror movie. Her mother, brother John, and John's friend Dana Wingate had been brutally murdered. The bodies were bound and gagged.

The Mysterious Survivor

Remarkably, three children were found unharmed in the cabin. Sheila, her younger sister Tina, and her friend Dana's younger brother Rick had spent the night in a separate room and somehow escaped the killer's notice. Their survival remains one of the most puzzling aspects of the case.

A Fruitless Investigation

The Keddie Cabin Murders investigation left more questions than answers. Despite a flurry of activity, the case went cold. Theories and suspects emerged, but no one was ever convicted. The murders cast a long shadow over the community, which struggled to come to terms with the brutal crime.

The Unsolved Mystery

To this day, the Keddie Cabin Murders remain one of California's most baffling unsolved mysteries. Theories range from a random act of violence to personal vendettas, but none have led to a conclusive resolution.
