Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Answers will vary, but students should describe a crayon's perspective and a suggested change Duncan could make.
2. Answers should discuss how Duncan changed the way he colored and how this led to a more creative and unique drawing.
3. Answers should explain how fairness is important in different situations, like at school, work, or in friendships.
4. Answers should include a personal example of when someone wanted to feel more valued and how that experience relates to the crayons' feelings.
