Leading the Nation: The Birth of the Executive Branch

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Having a president instead of a king is important because it prevents one person from having too much power.
2. (Opinion-based) A student might say they would create a new law, help people, or improve schools.
3. Three branches of government help keep power balanced and prevent unfair decisions.
4. A good president should be honest, fair, a good leader, and care about the people.
