The Little Star's Journey

Once upon a time, in a galaxy far, far away, there was a little star named Stella. Stella lived in the vast, twinkling sky, surrounded by her starry friends. However, she always felt that her light was not as bright as the others, and this made her sad.

One night, while all the stars were gathered together, a shooting star named Comet appeared. Comet had a special task to perform – to bring wishes from the children of the world to the stars. Stella was fascinated by Comet's mission and wanted to help.

She approached Comet and asked if she could join him on his journey to Earth to collect wishes. Comet agreed, and together they embarked on their adventure. As they traveled through the night sky, they listened to the wishes of children and collected them in a magical bag.

Over time, Stella's light began to shine brighter and brighter as she absorbed the love and hope of the children's wishes. She realized that her uniqueness made her special, and her light had the power to bring joy to others.

One day, as they returned to the sky after their journey, Stella noticed that a group of stars was not shining as brightly as they could. Stella shared the wishes she had collected with them, and they began to shine brighter too. The sky was filled with the radiant glow of stars, each carrying the wishes of children.

From that day on, Stella continued to collect wishes and share them with her fellow stars, spreading happiness throughout the universe. She had learned that it was not the brightness of her light but the love and kindness in her heart that truly mattered.
