

Name _____

The Magic of Music

Open Ended Questions Answers

1. Music in Melodyville was believed to have magical properties, with each instrument possessing unique powers. Sarah's violin exemplified this belief by having the power to make animals dance. This magical aspect of music was a core part of the town's culture, and it connected people with their environment and each other.
2. Sarah's playful experiment with her violin, making animals dance, led to her becoming the "Dancing Musician of Melodyville" because it showcased the extraordinary potential of music in their town. The townspeople were amused and entertained by the dancing animals, making her a local legend.
3. Sarah's heartfelt ballad resolved the town's drought issue by bringing much-needed rain. This demonstrated the true magic of music, as it had a tangible and positive impact on the town's well-being. Music was not just a form of entertainment but a force that could heal, nourish, and bring joy.
4. Sarah's attitude towards her musical gift evolved from initially using it for mischief to using it for the benefit of her town. This change likely occurred as she realized the profound impact her music could have on the people and environment of Melodyville. She shifted from seeking amusement to recognizing the responsibility that came with her gift and the ability to make a positive difference.

