Marching Forward

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. The Civil Rights Movement helped end segregation, led to new laws protecting rights, and made the U.S. more equal.
2. Peaceful protests helped people see that change was needed without violence. It also made more people support the movement.
3. Other examples include the Women's Rights Movement and protests for fair working conditions.
4. Today, people of all races have equal rights, and laws protect against discrimination in schools, jobs, and public places.
