

Name _____

The Haunting Melody of Midnight

Short Answer Key

1. The Crescendo House had ivy-covered walls and intricate wrought-iron gates. Inside, the grand hall was dimly lit with flickering candlelight, and portraits of long-dead musicians adorned the walls.
2. The spectral musicians offered Amelia eternal fame and musical prowess in return for joining their ensemble. The price was her eternal servitude in the cursed symphony.
3. Amelia broke free from the curse by playing a discordant and jarring melody, disrupting the spectral musicians and causing them to fade away. The outcome was that she was left alone in the grand hall, free from the haunted performance.
4. The atmosphere grew increasingly eerie and dissonant as the night wore on, and the spirits closed in on her, making her realize the sinister nature of the performance.
5. Amelia likely felt a mixture of fascination and terror about the haunting melody and her experience at the Crescendo House. The memory of that night would likely haunt her dreams.
