Mirror's Reflection

In the world of mirrors, a constant gaze,
A struggle within, through life's maze,
With eyes that judge and minds that doubt,
In this poem, the journey of self to tout.
The mirror's surface, a relentless foe,
Reflecting flaws, a never-ending woe,
A battle fought in silence, within the mind,
In this verse, the story of self, confined.
But listen closely, dear friend, and see,
Beyond the mirror's harsh decree,
Within your heart, a treasure lies,
In this tale of self, let's realize.
For beauty's not in the mirror's view,
It's in the kindness that shines through,
In laughter shared with friends so dear,
In love and kindness, there's nothing to fear.
Embrace your quirks, your flaws, your grace,
In your unique self, find your place,
The mirror may deceive and tell you lies,
But in your heart, the truth will rise.
So let us journey toward self-acceptance,
Breaking free from the mirror's trance,
In this path we all must tread,
To love ourselves, and be widely spread.
