

Name _____

Nature's Gift

Multiple Choice Questions

1. How does the boy's behavior reflect how humans treat nature?
 - a) He plays with the tree but never takes anything from it.
 - b) He helps the tree grow by planting new seeds.
 - c) He takes from the tree without thinking about the future.
 - d) He shares everything he takes from the tree.

2. What happens to the tree by the end of the story?
 - a) It grows back taller than before.
 - b) It becomes a stump after giving everything to the boy.
 - c) It stops giving because it is angry.
 - d) It asks the boy to plant new trees.

3. How can The Giving Tree be seen as a message about the environment?
 - a) It shows that nature has unlimited resources.
 - b) It warns that taking too much from nature can lead to destruction.
 - c) It encourages people to cut down trees for their needs.
 - d) It teaches that trees do not need sunlight or care.

4. What could the boy have done differently to take better care of the tree?
 - a) He could have planted new trees or shared the apples.
 - b) He could have taken more from the tree to make a bigger house.
 - c) He could have never visited the tree again.
 - d) He could have ignored the tree and played elsewhere.

5. What does the story suggest about human responsibility for nature?
 - a) People should take as much as they need without worrying.
 - b) Trees are only useful for making houses and boats.
 - c) Nature does not need any help from people.
 - d) People should appreciate and protect nature instead of only taking from it.

