Power Struggle

Short Answer Key

1. Federalists wanted a strong central government to unite the country and manage important national issues.
2. They feared the national government would take away individual freedoms and state power.
3. It guaranteed rights like free speech, fair trials, and state protections.
4. The Civil War (other answers may include civil rights conflicts or modern state vs. federal debates).
5. People still argue over what powers states should have, such as in education, healthcare, and voting laws.
