What Does a Rabbit Eat?

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Wild rabbits eat grass, clover, and plants they find in nature, while pet rabbits are given hay, leafy greens, and small treats by their owners.
2. Rabbits eat their food twice to make sure they get all the nutrients they need from their diet.
3. Wild rabbits use their sense of smell to find food but must avoid predators and compete with other animals for food.
4. If I were caring for a pet rabbit, I would give it hay, leafy greens, and small amounts of fruits and vegetables to keep it healthy and happy.
