What Does a Raccoon Eat?

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Being an omnivore helps raccoons survive in different environments because they can eat a wide variety of foods, from plants to animals.
2. Raccoons are successful at living near humans because they are resourceful, can eat many types of food, and are skilled at opening containers and finding shelter.
3. Raccoons might dip their food in water to clean it or feel its texture better before eating.
4. A perfect meal for a raccoon might include fish, nuts, and berries because these are foods they enjoy and provide the energy they need to survive.
