

Name _____

Do Leopards Form Relationships with Other Species?

Short Answer Key

1. Mutualism means both species benefit from the relationship.
2. Parasites like ticks can cause discomfort and health problems for leopards.
3. Vultures benefit from eating scraps left by leopards after a hunt.
4. Jackals following leopards for leftover food is an example of commensalism.
5. Leopards help control prey populations, keeping the ecosystem balanced.
