Where Does a Rhinoceros Live?

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Rhinos live in specific habitats because they need food, water, and the right climate to survive. Deserts and icy regions don't meet their needs.
2. If rhino habitats keep shrinking, they might not have enough food or space, which could lead to their extinction.
3. Conservation efforts protect rhinos by giving them safe places to live and helping maintain the balance of nature.
4. Ideas to protect rhino habitats could include creating more reserves, educating people about rhinos, and enforcing laws against deforestation.
