Rising from the Rubble

Amidst the chaos, when skies turned gray,
I faced a crisis, my world in disarray,
The ground trembled, the winds did roar,
A natural disaster, like never before.
Houses crumbled, streets torn apart,
I felt the fear deep in my heart,
But in the aftermath, amidst the pain,
I found strength to rise again.
The rubble was heavy, the path unclear,
But I knew I had nothing to fear,
With hope as my guide, I took a stand,
To rebuild my life, to heal the land.
Neighbors came together, hand in hand,
To rebuild our homes, to reclaim the land,
In unity, we faced the darkest hour,
And found within us a hidden power.
The scars remained, a reminder true,
Of all we'd lost and the trials we'd been through,
But we emerged stronger, our spirits renewed,
A testament to resilience, in times so crude.
So, though the disaster left its scar,
It also revealed just who we are,
A community that wouldn't bend or sway,
In the face of darkness, we'd find our way.
