

Name _____

Scooby-Doo Mystery at Sleepaway Camp

It was a bright summer day, and the Mystery Inc. gang was on their way to Camp Crystal Lake for a relaxing weekend getaway. Velma, Daphne, Fred, Shaggy, Scooby-Doo, and, of course, the Mystery Machine were all packed up and ready for fun.

As they arrived at the camp, they were greeted by the camp director, Mr. Jenkins. He welcomed them with a smile and explained that they were just in time for the annual Camp Crystal Lake Talent Show. The gang eagerly agreed to join in the festivities.

That night, under the starry sky, the talent show began. Daphne and Velma teamed up for a dazzling magic act, while Fred showed off his juggling skills. Shaggy and Scooby-Doo took the stage next, attempting to perform a comedy routine, but they ended up with everyone in stitches when they accidentally threw pies at each other.

Just as the gang was getting ready to wrap up their performance, a loud crash echoed through the camp. The lights flickered, and a mysterious figure dressed as a ghost appeared out of nowhere, scaring everyone away. It was time for Mystery Inc. to get to work!

Scooby and Shaggy were reluctant to investigate, but a promise of Scooby Snacks convinced them otherwise. The gang split up to search for clues, and it didn't take long for Velma to discover a hidden passage beneath the stage.

As they ventured into the passage, they stumbled upon an old legend about a treasure hidden at Camp Crystal Lake. It seemed the ghostly figure was after the treasure, and they were determined to find it first.

After a series of hilarious mishaps, including Scooby and Shaggy getting trapped in a giant pizza, the gang finally solved the mystery. The "ghost" was none other than Mr. Jenkins, the camp director, who was trying to scare everyone away to keep the treasure for himself.

With Mr. Jenkins unmasked and taken away by the authorities, the gang enjoyed the rest of their stay at Camp Crystal Lake, earning applause for their bravery at the talent show. They realized that every camp had its secrets, but with Mystery Inc. around, they would always be uncovered.

