Where Does a Sea Turtle Live?

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Sea turtles need ocean habitats for food and travel and beaches for laying their eggs, making both essential for their survival.
2. If pollution continues to increase, sea turtle populations might decline due to destroyed habitats and greater threats like entanglement in fishing nets.
3. Long migrations help leatherback turtles find food in different parts of the ocean and avoid areas where resources are scarce.
4. As part of a conservation team, I would educate people about sea turtles, create protected nesting areas, and work to clean up ocean pollution.
