

Name _____

Exploring the World of Social Work

Short Answer

1. Provide an example of a situation where a social worker might need to use their problem-solving skills to help a client.
2. Explain why documentation is an essential aspect of a social worker's work, and how it benefits both the social worker and their clients.
3. Describe how a social worker can advocate for resources on behalf of a client and provide an example.
4. Discuss the importance of empathy in the field of social work and how it can positively impact the client-social worker relationship.
5. What are some potential challenges that social workers may face in their daily work, and how can they overcome these challenges?

