

Name _____

Fashionable Choices: Who Decides What's In Style?

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. One recent fashion trend I've observed is the resurgence of tie-dye patterns. I believe this trend originated from a desire for nostalgic and colorful patterns. Tie-dye became popular during the 1960s and 1970s, and it has made a comeback among various age groups, from teenagers to adults. The trend has been embraced by fashion designers who incorporated tie-dye into their collections, making it accessible to a wide range of consumers.
2. As a fashion designer, I would draw inspiration from various sources. I might find inspiration in nature, with its vibrant colors and intricate patterns, or in my cultural heritage, incorporating traditional elements into modern designs. My personal experiences and travels would also play a significant role in my creations. For instance, a trip to a foreign country might inspire a collection with multicultural influences. Overall, my goal would be to create clothing that tells a story and connects with people on a personal level.
3. Sustainable fashion is making a positive impact on the industry. Consumers and designers can collaborate to promote sustainability. Designers can use eco-friendly materials like organic cotton or recycled fabrics. They can also embrace ethical practices, ensuring fair wages and safe working conditions for garment workers. Consumers can support sustainable brands and make informed choices about their purchases. Eco-friendly practices include clothing recycling programs, reducing water usage in dyeing processes, and using sustainable packaging materials.
4. One trend that I was inspired by was the "athleisure" trend popularized by celebrities like Rihanna. It involved combining athletic wear with everyday clothing. I embraced this trend by incorporating comfortable leggings, sneakers, and sporty tops into my daily outfits. It made me feel both stylish and comfortable, allowing me to seamlessly transition from workouts to casual outings. The trend's versatility and comfort were a big draw, and it felt empowering to take fashion cues from influential figures.

