

Name _____

The Talking Toilet of Terror

Once upon a time in a sleepy suburban neighborhood, there was a house that had a bathroom with a very unusual secret. This bathroom was home to the Talking Toilet of Terror, or so it was called by the kids in the neighborhood.

The Talking Toilet had a quirky personality. Whenever someone sat down, it would greet them with a cheerful "Hello there! How's your day going?" It didn't matter if it was morning, afternoon, or even the middle of the night - the Talking Toilet was always ready for a chat.

At first, the family living in the house found the Talking Toilet amusing. But soon, its constant chatter became a source of annoyance. It would comment on everything, from the weather to the color of the toilet paper. It even told bad jokes, making bathroom breaks an exercise in patience.

One day, the family decided they'd had enough of the Talking Toilet's relentless banter. They brainstormed ideas to silence it, from placing a towel over the lid to trying to flush it away. But nothing worked.

Desperate for a solution, they called in a plumber who specialized in talking toilets. The plumber, Mr. Fixit, examined the Talking Toilet and discovered that it had a tiny chip that had been programmed to chat incessantly.

With a few taps of his wrench, Mr. Fixit deactivated the chip, and the Talking Toilet fell silent. The family rejoiced and celebrated with a peaceful bathroom break.

However, just when they thought the ordeal was over, the Talking Toilet made one last comment. "I'll be back... when you least expect it!" it whispered ominously.

The family decided to replace the Talking Toilet with a regular one, but they couldn't help but wonder if it would return someday with even more terrifying tales to tell.