Love's Tragic Journey

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Sarah and Mark's love story ended tragically when they were involved in a bicycle accident caused by a speeding car. Mark lost his life in the accident, leaving Sarah overwhelmed with grief and sorrow.
2. Sarah's friends and family tried to support her by offering condolences, spending time with her, and being there to listen when she needed to talk. They tried to provide comfort and companionship during her grieving process.
3. Nature and the outdoors played a significant role in Sarah's journey of coping with grief. They served as a source of solace and connection to Mark's memory, as they had shared many happy moments in natural settings. The outdoors allowed her to feel closer to him.
4. Sarah whispered her thoughts to the wind by the lake where she and Mark had spent time together as a way to feel connected to his memory. It symbolized her belief that he was still with her in spirit, even though he was no longer physically present. The wind carried her words and feelings to him, providing a sense of comfort and connection.
