The Case Against School Uniforms: Let Kids Be Kids!

Open-Ended Response Answer Key

1. Requiring school uniforms can limit a student's ability to express their personality and interests through clothing, which is important because it allows them to showcase their unique identity and preferences. Self-expression helps build self-confidence and creativity.
2. School uniforms can be costly for parents, as they may need to purchase multiple sets, especially if uniforms wear out quickly. The cost of uniforms can put financial stress on families, particularly those with limited budgets.
3. School uniforms may not prepare students for the real world because they do not reflect the dress code expectations in most professions. In adulthood, people are not required to wear uniforms in their jobs, and students need to learn how to adapt to different clothing norms.
4. The passage suggests addressing bullying through education and awareness, as uniforms alone do not guarantee a reduction in bullying. By educating students about the importance of kindness, empathy, and respect, schools can create a more inclusive and supportive environment.
