

Name _____

Voices United

In the heart of the city, a sea of faces,
A protest ignites, in open spaces,
Voices raised, hearts afire,
In this poem, the tale of social desire.
We march for justice, side by side,
In unity and hope, our hearts are tied,
Against injustice, we take a stand,
With banners high, and posters in hand.
The streets echo with our chants and songs,
As we demand the righting of societal wrongs,
A peaceful rally, a call for change,
In this vibrant moment, we rearrange.
The world watches as we make our plea,
For equality, justice, and rights to be free,
A powerful movement, for a better day,
In this poem, our voices, we convey.
The sun sets, but our spirits remain,
In the fight for justice, we'll sustain,
With love and hope, we'll pave the way,
In the world of activism, we'll have our say.
And as we march forward, hand in hand,
We'll strive for a world that's truly grand,
In this journey of protest and social strife,
Together, we'll change the course of life.

