The Wild World of Frogs - Open-Ended Question Answer Key

1. Frogs are important because they control insect populations and serve as food for larger animals, helping to keep ecosystems balanced.
2. It's surprising because frogs are small, yet their combined weight (biomass) worldwide is very large, showing how many frogs there are and their significance in nature.
3. Protecting endangered frogs is crucial because they play key roles in ecosystems, and their loss could disrupt food chains and lead to environmental imbalances.
4. This ability allows wood frogs to survive extremely cold winters by freezing almost solid, then resuming normal activities when the weather warms up, which helps them thrive in colder environments.
