Zoroastrianism: The Ancient Faith of Fire and Wisdom

Short Answer Key

1. The core beliefs of Zoroastrianism include belief in one supreme deity, Ahura Mazda, and the duality of good and evil. Followers are encouraged to think good thoughts, speak good words, and perform good deeds. Fire is considered sacred, and ethical conduct is highly valued.
2. Fire is a symbol of purity and divinity in Zoroastrianism. It represents the presence of Ahura Mazda and is used as a means of worship. Fire temples are important places of worship, and the Atash Behram is the highest grade of consecrated fire.
3. The Avesta is the sacred text of Zoroastrianism, containing the teachings of the prophet Zoroaster. It serves as a guide for religious rituals, prayers, and ethical principles. It is a central source of religious knowledge and is revered by Zoroastrians.
4. The Parsis are a Zoroastrian community that predominantly resides in India, particularly in the state of Gujarat. They are descendants of Zoroastrians who migrated from Persia to India to escape religious persecution.
5. Zoroastrians promote environmental stewardship by emphasizing the protection of nature and the elements, including water and fire. They believe in the importance of maintaining a clean and pure environment, which aligns with their values of goodness and purity.
